Where There is Love,
There is Life!

ANNUAL REPORT 2024

As I reflect on the past year at A Woman's Concern, I am inspired by the truth of the words, "Where there is love, there is life." This simple yet profound statement perfectly captures the heart of our mission and the lives we have the honor to touch every single day.

At the core of what we do is love—the love that empowers women, nurtures families, and protects the gift of life. This past year, we have seen this love in action in countless ways—through mothers who embraced the courage to choose life, through volunteers who generously give of their time, and through donors whose love for life turns struggles into joy for the women and families we serve.

Our commitment to maternal health has been a cornerstone of our efforts this year. We believe that when a mother is supported—physically, emotionally, and through education—she thrives, and so does her family. In 2024, we expanded our health and safety classes and implemented a series of group classes specifically taught by our nurses. These classes ensure even more comprehensive care for families in need.

THIS PAST YEAR, WE HAVE:

- ▶ Served a record-breaking 827 unique clients and patients, equipping each one with the knowledge and resources needed to prepare for a healthy pregnancy and a thriving future.
- ▶ Partnered with local healthcare providers to ensure access to critical maternal health resources, including prenatal care, nutrition, and mental health support.
- ▶ Welcomed 218 men to our medical appointments and education classes throughout the year.

These numbers represent lives transformed, not just through services, but through relationships built in love.

As we look to the future, we are more committed than ever to advancing maternal health, advocating for the dignity of every life, and creating a community where families are strong, and life is cherished.

Thank you for partnering with us. Thank you for loving our families. None of this would be possible without your generosity and prayers. Together, we are making a difference—one life, one family, one story at a time.

Ava's Story

A Story of Support and Strength

Ava was facing a huge obstacle—again.

Five years ago, complications while breastfeeding her firstborn had filled her days with worry and heartache. With hope in her heart for her second child, she believed that her previous experience and the wisdom she had since gathered would guide her to a more fulfilling outcome. Yet, on the day her baby was born, she found herself in a hospital bed, desperately trying to nurse her newborn with little success. Each cry from her hungry baby deepened her sense of desperation, and the support offered by the hospital staff only seemed to go so far. But luckily, Ava knew exactly who to call.

Back in 2019, Ava had walked through our purple doors looking for prenatal support upon learning she was pregnant. A Woman's Concern met her with compassion and offered that support, providing her with a medical confirmation and material assistance. After the birth of her first baby, Ava struggled with breastfeeding—a painful chapter marked by a rough delivery and overwhelming stress that left her able to nurse for only one month. When news of her second pregnancy arrived, she recalled the caring hands that had once guided her and reached out to us again.

In the five years between her first and second pregnancies, AWC developed several new health and safety classes.

Ava jumped right in. She was active in class, asking questions, and telling other moms about her story.

In her classes, Ava learned that breastfeeding has many benefits. For most babies, breastfeeding is an amazing option as it supplies key nutrition needed for growth and development. It also provides antibodies for the baby to fight off infection and develop a healthy immune system, and supports maternal health by reducing postpartum risks. Breastfeeding and responsive caregiving can help strengthen the bond between mother and child.

During her classes, Ava would repeatedly say to Heidi, one of AWC's RNs and lactation consultants, "I wish I knew this the first time." After learning more about the benefits of breastfeeding and different methods, Ava felt that for this baby, she had the knowledge and support system to try breastfeeding once more.

Yet on the day of her delivery, Ava found herself yet again having trouble breastfeeding her baby. She felt the weight of not being able to breastfeed—the loss of something she felt would be significant for both her and her baby. The hospital staff offered lactation support, but it was not working. Feeling so defeated and alone, she knew who she could call for help. Heidi answered the phone, and they planned to have an in-person consultation that week.

Ava walked into AWC's office on a Thursday afternoon. As soon as the door shut to the medical room, Ava slumped over onto Heidi's shoulder in a puddle of tears. Through sobs and while holding her newborn baby, she expressed how defeated she felt in her struggle to breastfeed. All she wanted was to have this connection with her newborn and be able to feed her baby. Heidi consoled her and told her that she was not alone. Every woman and every baby is different. They would develop a plan specifically for them so that Ava could breastfeed her beautiful newborn baby.

All she wanted was to have this connection with her newborn and be able to feed her baby.

After the consultation, Ava left the office with not just a plan, but with a renewed smile and a heart filled with hope. Over the next days, following the guidance and support of Heidi, the process of breastfeeding began to feel more natural—each feeding a quiet, tender chapter in the growing love story between Ava and her baby. A few days later, when Heidi called to follow up, Ava's excitement soared as she shared the success of a consistent breastfeeding routine. For the next two months, this journey blossomed into a celebration of motherly love and resilience.

As Ava's story continues, AWC remains by her side, ready to offer warmth, encouragement, and any future support that her evolving story might require.

The Story for 2024

Lives Touched, Lives Changed

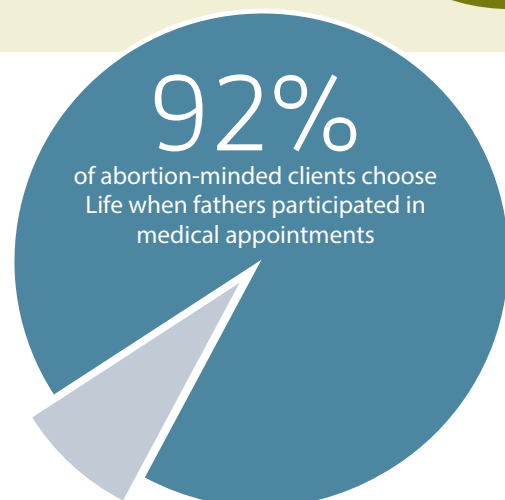

Throughout 2024, we witnessed the unfolding of countless “love” stories—stories of hope, support, and transformation. Despite the challenges presented by the elimination of Real Alternatives Funding in 2023, our pregnancy center remained steadfast in its mission.

With unwavering resilience, we not only maintained stability but also experienced meaningful growth in many areas of our operation. From the deepening of our community impact to our commitment to financial stewardship, we reached significant milestones, all driven by the love and care that defines our work.

Remember Us?

Kado is thriving despite the challenges SMA type 1 creates for him and his family. At 7 months old, he's impressively meeting many of the milestones typical of his age. While sitting up unaided remains a little bit of a challenge, his determination and progress are truly inspiring.

Kado and his mother Alyssa still attend classes regularly at AWC and are grateful for the support system they have within these walls. Check out the smile on his face! He is truly a happy baby!

Watch (or rewatch!) our video about Alyssa, Noah, and Kado at FriendsofAWC.com/videos/
